

I recieved an e-mail this morning regarding a case to allow businesses that have a business 'relationship' with you to be exempt from the no-call list in Indiana.

I am asking that this not be considered. Banks, telephone companies, cable companies, credit card companies are the bulk of the irritating telemarketing phone calls we used to receive. It doesn't matter if we do business with them or not, we still do not want them calling our home to try and sell us more products, conduct surveys, etc. in the hours we are at home with our families. Before the Do Not Call list, we stopped answering our telephone altogether, that's how bad it had become. We let the answering machine pick up every phonecall and told friends and family to start talking on the machine if they wanted us to answer. You should not dread picking up your phone.

I ask that you continue to protect Indiana residents right to enjoy their time at home without harrassing calls from telemarketers.

Thank you for your consideration.
